SETP PARTNERS Mission Statement

The mission of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots (SETP) Partners is to provide members and their loved ones the gift of being able to grieve loss without financial chaos and unanswered questions of what to do.

The Partners started the project in 2011 in the wake of experience: that most often the person who dies leaves their financial life unprepared and disorganized, and with mysteries that leave the survivors guilt ridden and many times in financial stress.

The SETP Partners are providing this guidebook free to the SETP members and their families so they can allow survivors to KNOW what would have been wanted, to BE ASSURED they will not be upended financially, and to SPEND THEIR TIME GRIEVING and RECOVERING from tragedy. All because time was spent laying out a plan now.

The Society of Experimental Test Pilots and the Society of Experimental Test Pilots Foundation take great pride in thanking the members of the original SETP Partners Committee (listed alphabetically) for their extraordinary efforts in providing this most worthwhile document to the SETP membership.

Method of Handbook Rewrite 2023

This rewrite comes twelve years after the original, with more experiences of sitting with survivors following loss, feedback from user of the original handbook, and updates to the laws surrounding inheritance. Your checklist, individualized to marital / family circumstance, gives you in order of importance all the tasks to leave your survivors prepared, with emphasis for what is easy / little time demand (and therefore can be prioritized) and what will take more time or budget.

- Single with No Partner or Dependents
- Single with Partner (unmarried)
- Single with Minor Children (full or shared custody)
- Married, no minor children
- Married, with minor children

Important Disclosure

The Society of Experimental Test Pilots Partners put this handbook together for the use of its members and their families in order to plan ahead for an eventual death. It is a work in progress and, as such, no claim is made or implied that it is 100% complete. We have done our best to include everything we considered relevant at the time of publication; however, changes and updates to this document will invariably be made over time.

If you have used this document, either in preparation for or following the death of a family member, your constructive criticism is always welcome and appreciated. Please send your comments to setp@setp.org or mail them to:

WHY

It is both a question and a statement.

It's the question that those who know you, who are your friends, and who are those you love and are loved by will ask.

Why are you gone?

Why did it have to happen to you?

Why didn't we talk about this situation when you were with us?

Why didn't you leave any instructions?

Leave a Roadmap

Hikers, people who bike, and those who go on road trips know the value of a set of turn-by-turn directions – even if you know the destination well. Leaving a road map for your family and friends is efficient and the kindest gift you could give them. Grief blocks logic and renders ordinarily capable people unable to make wise decisions. Having no plan can leave someone you care for without resources to pick the pieces up and move on in life. It also wastes money you saved in needless fees, court costs and attorney's fees.

With this guidebook and checklists tailored to each marital / relationship situation, we hope to avoid these mysteries.

The checklists that follow are the equivalent of setting up turn by turn directions for your family and friends to follow. Many of the tasks are simple, require little time and effort, but have enormous impact. Some tasks can be done online with the aid of tools, most can be done by simply printing things out you already have access to. But they save time and even thousands of dollars by having accomplished them in advance. Some things, like having a will, naming a guardian for children, or deciding to set up a trust when appropriate, save not only a great deal of money, frustration, and time, but also don't leave division of property or assignment of children to temporary guardians up to the courts and their lengthy timelines to decide.

You would not choose to fly without a properly packed parachute because you don't plan to crash. There is no superstition that flying with a packed parachute causes a plane to crash. Leaving your family secure means you also can be secure. Your family and friends depend upon you to prepare.

Unmarried + Partner

People likely impacted: Partner's income, housing, benefits, short and long term assets.

Goal: "Leave No Mysteries" "Make sure financial life carries on "

Do the items with *asterisk right away because they are the easiest – no cost, takes very little time, has maximum effectiveness.

Otherwise, the list is in order of importance and increases in complexity when you get to creation of a will and associated legal documents.

Check These First and Make Changes as Needed

- Beneficiaries (Primary and Contingent) for your Roth IRA, IRA, 401k accounts
- Beneficiaries for your Insurance policies – check each site, even employer paid policies

- NOTE: DO NOT LIST YOUR ESTATE OR LEAVE BLANK – name individuals or trusts established instead.
- THE NAMED BENEFICIARY WILL INHERIT THE ACCOUNT, NO MATTER WHAT YOUR WILL SAYS, EVEN IF YOU ARE DIVORCED

Ownership of your things – do you own any account or property WITH someone else? Who gets the property when you die?

- Joint With Right of Survivorship (JTWROS) will leave that asset to the other named person. This is best to leave your property 100% to your partner with no probate involved.
- Tenants in Common will leave the ownership split between the other named person and who the state probate law thinks are your heirs.
- Anything titled in your name alone goes to whoever the state probate law thinks is your legal heir. Every state has its own rules who this would be.
- BEST PRACTICE: Reregister bank and brokerage accounts that are ONLY IN YOUR NAME as Transfer On Death (TOD) -may also be called Payable On Death (POD). You will continue to be sole owner until you die, then whoever you name won't have to jump through hoops or probate to gain access.

Credit Cards – MAKE SURE PARTNER IS JOINT OWNER.

If the Partner is listed as "Additional User" and not "Joint Owner", the credit card will be closed and not transferable to Partner alone. Additional Users have no responsibility or obligation to make payments on the card, so banks have no one to secure the debt without you.

Create The KEY DOCUMENTS – Will require Professional Assistance

- A Will for who gets your belongings / assets that do not have a listed beneficiary, or whose ownership is not JTWRROS.
- A Durable Power of Attorney for your partner to act legally on your behalf.
- A Living Will to allow trusted loved one / your named partner to make decisions regarding your healthcare or extraordinary measures to save your life or disconnect from life support.
- *Consider organ donation and update your driver's license.

Collect and Print Out

- List of contacts and contact info to let them know about your death / disability –
(Parents, family, friends, HR phone, CPA, mortgage / landlord, Pet's Vet)
- List of Passwords (phone, banking, brokerage accounts, retirement accounts, mortgage, credit cards, loans)
- Codes to access
(Storage units, gates, home alarm)
- List of digital assets (plus user name / password and answers to security questions in order to close down)

- Email accounts
- Social media accounts
- Online banking accounts
- Online subscription-based accounts
- Ecommerce or marketplace accounts (i.e. Amazon, eBay, etc.)
- Photos saved online or on the cloud
- Online chatroom accounts
- Cell phone apps
- Online dating or gaming accounts
- Online accounts for utilities
- Loyalty program benefits (i.e. frequent flyer miles, credit card perks, etc.)
- Any other personal information you store on your computer, cell phone, or tablet

Where do you Keep:

- *DD form 214 (if military)
- Will
- Material things not at your home
- *Keys to car / home / lockers / storage units / Boats / RV's
- Durable Power of Attorney
- Living Will
- Insurance Policies
- Deeds / Titles to Car, House, Boats, RV's (the Deed to your Home came with closing documents)

Print Out or Screen Shot

- Statement for each bank, brokerage, 401k / retirement account
- Statement for each debt / Credit Card
- List of your subscriptions (your phone may have this that you can screenshot) – audio, video, books, anything with a monthly or annual fee)
- List of your bills – KNOW YOUR BUDGET

Leave Instructions – Audio, Video, or Written

- *Identify in writing (and let them know):
 - Your Team – who will serve as executor or personal representative for your estate?
- Funeral or Party? How do you want your life celebrated?
- *Cremate or bury? Where?
- Leave a message to post on Social Media.

Glossary of Estate Planning

The Process of the Estate

Estate Plan The means by which you protect and provide for your family and others close to you. Estate planning is like a road map of your financial goals, both now and after death. Your Estate Plan can affect the way you live, especially in retirement years.

Probate Means “to prove” the Will is true and valid, which involves going to court (involving attorneys and court costs, paying probate fees to the state and takes months of time to complete transfer of assets). However, assets that have a listed beneficiary such as Jointly Owned property, Transfer or Payable on Death accounts, IRA’s, 401k’s, life insurance, annuities and retirement benefits do not probate – they pass directly to the named beneficiary.
IMPORTANT: To avoid probate, the beneficiary must be a person or a named Trust and not the “Estate of the deceased” nor be left blank when set up. There are fees for probate, based on the size and complexity of the estate, payable to the court, the state and the attorneys who are represented during the process.

Registration When an account is first set up, the labels that identify owner, the type of tax law that governs it, and the likely disposition of it when the owner passes away is called “registering” the account. Common registrations are: Sole (in one person’s name only), Transfer or Payable on Death (Sole owner lists a beneficiary to take ownership after death), Joint with Right of Survivorship, Joint Tenants in Common, Tenants in Common, Roth IRA: For Benefit Of (FBO), IRA FBO. Banks and custodians look to this registration to determine who is allowed to inherit the account.

The People Involved

Administrator When a person dies without a will, the court appoints someone to settle the debts, pay any taxes and funeral expenses, and distribute the remainder according to the court’s decision (guided by the laws of the state). This person’s services are paid by the estate.

Beneficiary The person(s) who will inherit the asset.

Primary and Contingent	A Primary Beneficiary is the first in line to inherit. You can have more than one Primary and will have to list the exact percentage each will inherit. A Contingent Beneficiary only inherits if the Primary is deceased or declines to inherit the asset. You may have multiple Contingent Beneficiaries, also with exact percentages listed.
Decedent	The person who has died.
Executor/Executrix	Your personal representative responsible for completing your wishes according to your Estate Plan or Will. This is not a small task; it is not always wise to make your children or partner your executor. Any expenses this individual incurs on behalf of the estate can be reimbursed by the estate at closure.
Trustee	An individual or organization that holds title to property and administers affairs for the benefit of another. In a Living Trust, the Trustees are the owners of the account until both are deceased, when the named "replacement" Trustee(s) take over management for the benefit of the beneficiaries that the Trust names and directs distribution for.

The Documents Needed

Durable Power of Attorney	A document that can authorize one or more persons to act on your behalf if you are not able to act on financial, legal, and administrative matters, especially if you are not competent to make these decisions for yourself. A durable power of attorney can enable your family members to manage affairs, without having a guardian or conservator appointed by the Probate Court. There are significant legal, administrative, privacy, and cost benefits to executing a durable power of attorney which will take effect if you are absent or mentally incompetent. This is not to be overlooked. This document is more useful in life than any other document on this list. Absolutely essential.
Healthcare Proxy	Also called a Healthcare Power of Attorney, this is one of the three REQUIRED documents you should have. It allows someone to make decisions, and have information released about your healthcare, in the event you are incapacitated. It is essential for unmarried individuals especially.

Living Trust

With a Revocable (meaning changes can be made any time) Living Trust, you can direct how you want your property managed and distributed, and it can contribute to family and financial protection by continuing income and support for your partner, children or other beneficiaries. A Revocable Living Trust takes effect during your lifetime and can be terminated or changed and updated at any time. It allows your directions to live on long past your death, protects the assets from creditors and predators, and its execution is strictly private, unlike a will.

Living Will

This is one of the REQUIRED documents you should have. This allows you to dictate what life-saving measures you want taken or withheld if a doctor deems that you are within a window of imminent death. Some States refer to the Document "Five Wishes" as this document.

Trust

You do not have to have large sums of money or property to have a Trust. They do not probate, so no court is involved in deciding whether your wishes are valid. A Trust is an estate-planning tool that can help you manage your property during your lifetime while ensuring a smooth transition of your affairs after death. People who should look into a Trust include those who are or have been divorced, those who anticipate an inheritance, people with properties in multiple states, people who adopt children, people with minor children, unmarried partners and couples where one is, and one is not, an American citizen.

Will

The most basic document you must have. It contains your instructions on who will receive any assets you own individually. Your Will nominates the executor of your estate and nominates the guardian(s) for your minor children. Assets passing under a Will have to be transferred through the probate process. Dying without a valid will is called "Intestate" and subjects the estate to more costs and longer processing by the courts. It also decrees how property will be divided and who will be the children's guardian according to State Laws.

PROBATE: FEES AND AVOIDANCE

The Probate process takes time and money (on average 2-7% of the total estate). Its results are a matter of public record. In some states it's complicated and very expensive (California is notorious), and the estate probates in every state in which the deceased owns real property at death.

Probate is made more expensive and more complicated by not having a Will (Intestate). Dying Intestate means more hoops to jump through to prove the intentions of the deceased and subjects the estate to being divided according to state law, which means things like dividing all the assets in the estate among all the possible beneficiaries (creating complications for supporting survivors).

Trust & Will, a site devoted to sales of their program for DIY estate planning, does have good basic information and links to more details which are clear to understand. In this link, scroll down to "Probate Costs by State":
<https://trustandwill.com/learn/probate-fees>

Your Goal is to make the process of transferring your assets as quick and easy and inexpensive as possible.

How to Avoid Probate

- Name Beneficiaries on your accounts
- Title accounts with "Transfer on Death" or "Payable on Death"
- Title property "Joint with Right of Survivorship" (any joint title with Survivor's Rights)
- Use a TRUST to hold and protect your assets

WAIT - What is a Trust? Aren't they only for Rich People?

NOT just for rich people! If you have children, real estate, properties in multiple states (especially California and other expensive / lengthy probate states), former spouses, dependents with special needs or a desire to distribute your assets over time – these are some of the many reasons you should consider a trust.

A trust is an estate planning tool designed to allow the deceased to provide for family or business needs beyond death, or to manage taxes, or to protect the estate from creditors and predators, and to maintain privacy. But it also avoids challenges to how the deceased divided their assets or who will care for the children. It can be all of these at once, depending on the provisions that are written into it.

Its main attractiveness might be to avoid probate, but registering or titling all your assets with a beneficiary or jointly will also avoid probate. However, probate will distribute property and assets immediately at the end of the process – imagine an 18-21 year old inheriting your house or all your money all at once – so if a slower, more spread out distribution is what you have in mind, a Trust will allow for that.

Doesn't it Cost a lot of Money to Manage the Trust?

A Revocable Living Trust, which is the simplest and most likely to be used by SETP members, allows the Trustees to be the Grantors of the Trust, which put simply means the Title says the Trust is the Official Owner, but the Trustees are the same people who owned the assets before the new registration. It's a paperwork change.

The Trustees (let's say a married couple for example) remain in full control of all the decisions of how to manage the property in the Trust. There is no outside management or Trust fees to be paid during the lifetimes of the Trustees.

At second death in this example, the Trust becomes Irrevocable, and at this point if it was desired to distribute the assets slowly over time, a Trust Company (such as at a Bank) will manage and distribute the Trust assets for a fee. The fee is similar to that charged by fee-only Financial Advisors. This is something to explore if you are considering a Trust. Talk to your bank first to see what their offerings are.

WHAT TO DO FIRST

1. Use the Checklist for your situation (Single, Married, etc) provided.
2. Create a Will – even a handwritten will found in a sofa was declared valid for Aretha Franklin!
3. Take the time to register your Assets either with a beneficiary for accounts like IRA's and 401k's, or a named person to follow on with Joint Title or Transfer on Death.
4. Talk with a qualified Estate Planning Attorney – Note that Financial Advisors or Wealth Managers are NOT qualified to draft Trusts.
5. If a Trust is the best fit, look for an all-in quote, which will include not only the Trust, but also a Will, a "Pour Over Will" for assets your forgot to register to your trust, a Durable Power of Attorney, a Living Will, and a Healthcare Power of Attorney. Expect to pay between $1500 and $4000 depending upon how complicated your situation is.

Assets List

Best practices and hacks for tackling this portion of your checklist:

PRINT OUT one statement from each of the type of accounts you have.

These will show:

- 1) The registration of the account (who the owner is)
- 2) The account number
- 3) The type of account (tax qualified or not)* if it's qualified, it will have an additional title, such as "IRA", "ROTH IRA", and of course, your 401k / 403b
- 4) The way to contact the company

On each statement, if you have a user name and password to access the account, write on the upper margin the url, and the user name and password and any security questions. If two factor is required to access, list which phone number will be used.

That way the survivor can access the most up to date statement at death, which is REQUIRED, along with a raised-seal death certificate, to re-register the accounts. Your attorney will require this information to execute the estate.

FYI: Identifying Accounts and Purposes

Tax-Qualified accounts (restricted by age / penalty to use in retirement (past age 59 ½): will have the individual's name, and the words, "IRA" or "ROTH" in the address label portion of the statement.

Non-Tax-Qualified (or Taxable – can be used any time) accounts:

- can be single registration with just the owner's single name on the address portion
- can be a couple's set of names followed by "JTWROS" or spelled out, "Joint With Right of Survivorship". Note - there can be more than two owners in JTWROS, as when elderly parents add an adult child to an account for monitoring purposes.
- can be a couple's set of names followed by "JT TEN" or spelled out, "Tenants in Common." This is a more rare registration.

College Savings Accounts: can be 529 accounts, which will list the custodian's name (usually one parent, but could be a grandparent or other relative), and prepaid Education accounts.

UGMA (Unified Gift for Minors Act) and UTMA (Unified Trust for Minors Act) accounts will be listed under the CHILD's name and social security number with the parent as custodian (but not owner).

Employer Incentives: Print out the grant statement for Restricted Stock Units (RSU's), any Stock Options, and a statement of any Deferred Compensation accounts. These will be available on your company website, or linked with your company retirement account.

LAST STEP: Group your statements together by the account types below and total the assets in each category.

LIFE INSURANCE POLICIES

Employer Group and Private Life Insurance Policies

Life insurance is the least expensive and most important asset you can have – it's instant savings for your family to live off of and is tax free.

It can be distributed in a check within days or weeks (depending on the company) and proceeds used flexibly: to pay off mortgages, deposit against college or retraining, pay off debts, or be invested to provide income for the survivors. It is the least expensive way to provide what would take decades to save and has never been less expensive to buy.

What do you have?

Employer Group Term

PRINT A COPY OF THE BENEFITS PAGE FROM YOUR EMPLOYER

Log into your employee benefits site. It will clearly list the total amount of group term insurance, spousal / family group term, ADD, and any supplemental insurance you purchased through employer.*

Group insurance works by distributing the risk across the company, or group. It's one of the cheapest benefits a company can offer. Under a certain amount you may not need any health exam, but you must sign up for it at either start of employment or annually (usually in the fall) for the company benefits selections for medical, retirement, and insurance benefits. Most employers provide the employee with a basic level of insurance at no cost to the employee. This threshold can vary from $50,000 to a multiple of salary. Anything over $50,000 will incur a very small charge to the employee which is deducted from salary each paycheck.

GOOD TO KNOW

FYI: Employer Insurance Coverage

- Most employer coverage is listed in terms of multiples of salary, which means you will need to update your plan annually as your salary increases.
- You might also have the option to increase coverage once a year (November) during annual enrollment, BUT this may involve medical qualification for coverage, and will definitely have a cap on the maximum amount that can be written. The employee pays for this benefit post tax out of their paycheck.
- You may or may not be able to keep this coverage when you leave your employer (need to contact the insurance company to determine the details on this) but you may never keep the employer base insurance if you leave.

EXAMPLE:

The table below contains an example of someone making $110,000 per year. They have a base benefit of 1.5x salary for a total of $165,000. When the salary changes, so does the Base Coverage. But normally the base coverage will eventually hit a high dollar cap, overriding the multiple and the salary increases. NOTE: For highly compensated employees, pay attention to this cap!

What is ADD?

ADD means Accidental Death and Dismemberment. It is a contingent additional amount - contingent on the loss of life directly due to accident in the case of accidental death, or a "bounty" paid if an accident results in the loss of a limb.

ADD is very difficult to collect because the insurance company requires virtually immediate death from this accident, and should not be factored in your basic calculation of the amount of coverage you have, since there is no way to predict how you will die.

What is a Miscellaneous Contingent Benefit?

Some companies provide a supplemental amount of life insurance in the event the death happens while on company business trip, while in a company airplane, etc. The contingency will be clearly stated. Again, this should not be counted upon as part of the basic benefit because it is not a guaranteed event or the only way you could perish.

Base Salary	Multiple of Salary	Base Coverage	Insurer	ADD	Misc Contingent Benefit
110,000	1.5	165,000	Snoopy Life Insurance	100,000	500,000

Privately Purchased and Owned Life Insurance Policies

PRINT OUT THE BENEFITS PAGE (WITH COVERAGE DETAILS) ON EACH POLICY

These are policies you have purchased and are not dependent upon your employer. In general it is best practice to own substantial coverage on yourself and your partner OUTSIDE of your employer so that if you change or lose your job, you do not lose your coverage.

Name of Insured	Insurance Company	Amount of Coverage	Premium	Policy Number	Issue Date	Length of Term
Joe Example	Bizzy Life Ins Co	$500,000	$50/month	MN12345	9/1/2000	20 years

Total Life Insurance my Partner owns: $ _____

How much Life Insurance Do I need?

Single / No Commitments or Dependents

Life insurance provided by employer is likely sufficient.

Cases where insurance may be needed:

- Private Student Loans (not Federal) and Parent Plus Loans will need to be paid off.
- You have a private loan you need to make sure is paid off at your death.
- You have an animal you want to provide for (leaving an amount for their care to whoever will adopt the pet).
- You have a charity or family member you want to leave a specific amount for

You may have enough assets accumulated to provide for these events, but if not, life insurance is the easiest and least expensive method of meeting the requirements.

Single /with a Partner and/or with children

How much you need depends on:

- Does your partner rely on all or part of your income to keep living in the home you share?
Then you need insurance and assets to provide that income for however long you both agree
- Do you provide monthly support for your child or have full custody and need to provide for the loss of your support?
Then you need insurance, mostly, and non-retirement assets enough to provide for the child to a pre-determined age.
- NOTE THAT SETP MEMBERSHIP INCLUDES EDUCATIONAL SUPPORT FOR THE CHILDREN OF MEMBERS. Currently the endowment allows for full support of college and equivalent coursework for the children of deceased members.
- You can find calculator support here.

Married / No Children you support

How much you need depends on:

- Is your partner reliant in any way on your income?
- Do you own a home? Have debts to be paid off?
- Is your partner employable? What if your partner is unable to work following your death?
- Do you provide monthly support for a non-custodial child?
- NOTE THAT SETP MEMBERSHIP INCLUDES EDUCATIONAL SUPPORT FOR THE CHILDREN OF MEMBERS.
- You can find calculator support here.

Life Insurance Calculators

And Pros and Cons to each

There are calculators online and within financial programs. If you try out a few of them you may find they do not all agree even if you supply the same information. That is because they vary with their assumptions for investment returns and inflation. You should always look at what those assumptions are in order to understand the differences in results.

Using these calculators may bombard you with ads soliciting buying insurance. However, none are retaining information unless you ask for quotes from one of the advertisers.

You may also contact an insurance professional but fair warning: they are trained to sell insurance, so more may be better. Ask them what their methodology and assumptions are too. Can't vouch for whether your search history will set you up for an increased number of ads for insurance.

You may contact a financial planner, but an investment advisor or wealth manager is typically not trained in insurance planning, so may not give you the best answer. A fee-only planner should be able to give you a good idea of how much coverage you need and refer you to how to get it, but many of those are also not trained or licensed to comment on life insurance.

On your own, an Old School Doesn't-Sell-Your-Info way to determine how much you need is this:

1. Add up the non-retirement assets and insurance you have.
2. Add up all the monthly income sources your family / partner may have coming in following your death (Salary from their job if able to continue working, Social Security for minors, Military Survivor Benefit Plan or Dependents Indemnity Compensation, rental property income, etc.)
3. Total your monthly bills to include any monthly savings or retirement deposits you have been making outside of 401k's.
4. Total up any debts which are to be paid off (credit cards, car, *maybe home if partner would continue to live in it and is unable to work – this one deserves thought and discussion with a financial planner).
5. Subtract the debt total from the non-retirement asset total. If there is more debt than assets, you either need more insurance or the debt payments need to be added to the monthly bills and will continue until they are paid off.
6. Subtract the monthly bills from the monthly income. If there is an overage, that's great. If there are more bills than income, go to next step.
7. Take the remaining asset total and multiply by .04. That will be a very rough estimate of the amount of money that can be withdrawn from the asset portfolio until retirement. Inflation will eat a bit more than the accounts can earn – it's the "safe withdrawal" multiplier that is frequently applied to retirement accounts.
8. Any deficits from this point require either more insurance or fewer expenses.

About using retirement account balances in this calculation: if the inheritor is a Non-Spouse, they have 10 years to fully withdraw all money from all inherited retirement accounts, regardless of their age past the age of majority. No rollovers are permitted.

The withdrawals are ALWAYS taxed at ordinary income tax rates – for example: if you withdraw $300K from a retirement account to pay off a house, $300K is added to the income received in that year and taxed accordingly. That will needlessly deplete the account early and leave a shockingly diminished value for retirement itself.

LARGE NUMBERS GIVE A FALSE SENSE OF SECURITY

This table shows you how the total amount of insurance you have may translate into a monthly income for your survivors. Time periods listed are for 10 years of income, 20 years, and 30 years, and the assumption is that between inflation and investment proceeds, the particular insurance amount in a single column will be exhausted after the period of time listed.

IMPORTANT: The assumption for this chart is that ALL of the insurance payout will be used purely for income; none will go to any debt payoff amounts.

If you have this much death benefit coverage	$100,000	$250,000	$500,000	$1 million
Survivors Monthly Income over 10 years	$990	$2475	$4950	$9900
Survivors Monthly Income over 20 years	$585	$1463	$2297	$5855
Survivors Monthly Income over 30 years	$457	$1144	$2290	$4578

The Probate Process

In the simplest cases, those in which there are no difficult creditor claims, disputes over ownership of assets, or arguments against a will, probate often goes smoothly. It occurs in seven phases, and if there are no complications that require additional phases, the system proceeds as follows.

1. Locating a will. In many cases, the decedent's attorney has the individual's will, and a simple call to let them know the person has passed away gets the process started. The lawyer will access the client file and begin probate administration. However, if the individual's loved ones are unsure of who prepared the will, they may need to search the person's home for documentation. It is important to note that wills should never be placed in a safe deposit box, as doing so may require a court order to open the box.
2. Providing a death certificate to the necessary entities. Any organization that will be involved in the probate process will require a death certificate. This may include life insurance companies, brokerage firms, and banks.
3. Filing a petition with the probate court. Probate administration requires filing a petition for probate, which usually includes the death certificate and a copy of the will. When there is a known will, the court will appoint the individual named by the decedent as the executor of the will. If there is no known will, the judge will typically appoint someone to be the administrator of the intestate estate.
4. Locating the person's assets. Sometimes identifying an individual's assets takes months to complete. It may even require waiting until the following year to get annual statements from all of the companies where the person held accounts. In some cases, professional appraisals are necessary to assess the value of belongings.
5. Paying creditors and necessary taxes. One of the executor's duties is to gather the individual's remaining bills, including any end-of-life medical expenses, ensure they are valid and pay them off. It is also necessary to file the individual's estate tax return and final income tax return.
6. Distributing assets to beneficiaries and heirs. Once all bills and liabilities of the person's estate are taken care of, the administrator or executor must distribute whatever assets are left to the decedent's legal heirs. If the individual had a will, it should outline which beneficiaries receive certain assets. However, in cases where there is no will, the remaining assets will be dispersed according to the state's intestacy laws.
7. Completing the process. To finish probate administration, the court must approve an accounting of the estate. Once the necessary tasks are completed, the probate court will close the individual's file.

Why Does Probate Take So Long?

In cases of a typical uncomplicated estate, the probate process cannot begin until after the individual's funeral. At that point, the executor must complete their required duties, such as locating assets, paying creditors, and handling taxes.

- The individual had no known will. If there is no will when a person passes away, the first step is for an individual to petition the court to appoint them as executor of their loved one's estate. If more than one person wishes to be the executor, the court will review their qualifications and decide. After an executor is in place, all debts must be paid before the remaining assets can be distributed. Since no one was named as an heir in a will, the assets are dispersed by means of an algorithm called intestate succession. If there is no will that can be legally validated, the probate process will take longer than if there was a will. BEST PRACTICE? MAKE A WILL

- There are many beneficiaries. In some cases, the duties involved in locating documents and handling the decedent's outstanding debts go smoothly, only to be complicated later by the number of beneficiaries the individual left assets to. Communication with various individuals, especially when they are not local to the area, can slow the process down. BEST PRACTICE? MAKE YOUR CONTACTS LIST AND INCLUDE UPDATED CONTACT INFO FOR BENEFICIARIES
- There are issues with the person's will. Any beneficiary has the right to contest a will, but it is rare for them to get a favorable ruling from the court. To win such a case, the person must prove the decedent was either coerced into signing the will or that they were not of sound mind when they signed. When a will is contested, it usually creates a major delay. BEST PRACTICE? This is a rare event, but happens most often when ex-spouses or estranged family are involved. Need Help? DIY? There's an App for That

The checklists and worksheets in this guidebook will take you through everything you need to prepare your family with the exception of creation of legal documents. You will have a paper file or can create a digital file of what you collect.

But maybe you are the sort of person who would prefer to use an app. The upside is you will be guided along, and have a built in place to store the instructions and documents. The downside is cost (subscription and storage fees), and being targeted by ads, although this author tried one of the recommended ones from the article below and has been impressed so far.
