AIMS AND OBJECTIVES
OF
THE SOCIETY OF EXPERIMENTAL TEST PILOTS

PRIMARY PURPOSES:

To promote that part of the aeronautical endeavor wherein there lies the moral obligation of the test pilot to the airplane passenger, the commercial, private and service pilot, without affecting the competitive structure of the industry.

To promote education of members, of those directly associated with aeronautical problems, and of the general public concerning those problems peculiar to the work of the experimental test pilot and other professional pilots.

GENERAL PURPOSES:

To promote air safety by presenting pilot opinion; to maintain cognizance of new flight equipment already adapted or in development; to exchange ideas, experiences and information regarding airplane escape systems and techniques; and to otherwise aid in the advancement of flight safety.

To promote technical advancement by providing for professional education through lectures, displays and presentations and by the exchange of information for mutual development of improved test techniques.

To promote sound aeronautical design and development; to describe and discuss newly encountered phenomena in the realm of flight for the mutual benefit of all, within the bounds of the primary purpose of this corporation and governmental security regulations; and to provide a society where the interchange of ideas, thoughts and suggestions concerning the aircraft as it affects the pilot will ultimately result in aid to the designer.

To broaden professional relationships among members; to maintain and increase the prestige, standing and influence of the test pilot in aeronautical progress; to assist in the obtaining of new pilot trainees; to provide scholarships and otherwise aid the families of deceased members; to provide scholarships and otherwise aid members in receiving education and graduate work in flight technique and safety; and to otherwise contribute to aeronautical advancement.

CORPORATE MEMBERSHIP

(Excerpts from Constitution of The Society of Experimental Test Pilots)

Any firm or corporation engaged in the design, manufacture or testing of manned aerospace vehicles, or components thereof, including ground equipment to support such vehicles, and those firms engaged in the study, design or manufacture of pilots'/astronauts' protective equipment shall be eligible for Corporate Membership in the Society. Every firm or corporation elected a member of the Society shall designate by letter, signed by a principal executive officer of the firm or corporation, a representative who shall officially represent such firm or corporation at meetings. Each such firm or corporation may also similarly designate alternate representatives who may perform such functions in the absence of the representative.

Annual dues for Corporate Members shall be in accordance with the following schedule:
